November 1 – 5, 2006

Methodology: Findings are based on a November 1 – 5, 2006, survey of high-propensity registered voters in California using an automated telephone dialer and the voice of a professional announcer. A Datamar proprietary algorithm was used to generate random samples of voters for calling. The margin of error for the total sample is +/- 3.7 percent at the 95 percent confidence level.

Registered voters vs. high-propensity voters: Registered voters who actually vote are significantly fewer than the voters who are registered to vote. Although it is sometimes useful to determine the opinions of all registered voters (and even the opinions of the general population), surveying the opinions of the high-propensity voters is more efficient and predictive for electoral/political purposes.

This survey is based on defining “high-propensity” voters as those eligible registered voters who have demonstrated high-propensity by having actually voted in one or more recent elections, specifically:

Voters who voted in the 2002 gubernatorial general election, and the 2004 Presidential general election.

Where necessary, responses were weighted according to age, gender, and political party.
